

Chapter 1366

Wordlessly, Sebastian looked at the wife he spent six whole years searching for. In her eyes, other than hatred, there was only a sense of calm.

She was always so relentless. Just like seven years ago, she dragged a big snake-skin bag and ran desperately to his and Selene's wedding hall to stop their wedding. Back then, she was firm and resolute, no longer caring whether she would live or die. And now, she was as firm and resolute as ever. But her goals were on two extreme ends of the scale.

Seven years ago, she wanted to marry him. This time, she was determined to divorce him.

She did not cry, did not flinch, only an unwavering determination and hatred could be seen in her eyes.

This made Sebastian realize she was no longer the same woman that she was six years ago. Even though six years ago and now, six years later, she remained calm and composed, but she was different.

and composed, but she was different.

Six years ago, she was a small and tender little thing. Even though she looked calm, she was so pitifully helpless. Because she was so pitifully helpless, because she could not find any warmth in this world, because she did not have the power to resist or fight back, and that was why she had no choice but to remain calm. Back then, as long as she was given a little warmth, just a little, it was enough to thaw her cold, frozen heart.

But now she was different.

Now, she was bullet-proof, and she did not need anyone's pity. Because she had grown strong enough herself. She was now strong enough that she could say to him calmly, "If you dare take Aino away from me. I will kill you."

He laughed emotionlessly. "Kill me? Your skills have gotten better?"

Sabrina smiled faintly too. "This is instinct, not skill."

He lifted an eyebrow, looking at her with interest. "Hmm?"

"Your new girlfriend can give you other children, as many as you want. But it's different for me. For the rest of my life, I won't have any other children but Aino. Besides, with Aino present, don't you think she'll remind you of me? Won't you find her to be a nuisance? That's why she can't live with you. She must live with me. Also, Aino has only been living with you for the past year. Your bond is not that tight yet." What she said was justified and well-founded.

"So, not only do you want Aino, but you also want her shares?" Sebastian asked with interest.

"Of course!" Sabrina looked at Sebastian calmly. "I can give up mine! But not Aino's! You are her father, since the Ford Group belongs to you, a part of will belong to her as well. You can have as many women as you like; you can live the rest of your life in wild abandon, but Aino is innocent. She could not choose her parents, nor could she decide whether her parents would divorce or not. If I do not even fight for her property, then as her mother, I would be making the same mother, I would be making the same mistake as my own mother and my grandmother?"

At this point, Sabrina's tone suddenly turned sad. She sighed and looked at him bravely. "Sebastian Ford, listen to me."

"I'm listening," Sebastian replied.

"I will never do what my grandmother did. Even though she knew my grandfather didn't want her, didn't love her, but still she chose to live near him, hoping that one day, my grandfather's heart would soften and he would take a look at my mother, give her some of his love.

"But in the end? My grandfather never had a change of heart. The person he loved the most in his life was his wife. From her perspective, what he did was right, and he was a loyal man.

"But what about me?"

Sabrina laughed in despair. "I am no luckier than my grandmother; even though I became your legal wife, you could not be loyal to your legal wife for
