

Time Travel to Become Your Sweetheart Chapter 12

Chapter 12 The Divorce Settlement

"Mommy, actually, when my little friends laughed at me, I was very unhappy, but I didn't cry."

Dayton's voice was soft, with a slight nasal sound. This child could only say something from his heart to Mommy after she fell asleep.

He rubbed his head against Jane's back and made a hug gesture. Dayton really wanted Mommy to hug him.

Jane felt sad as she listened. She really couldn't hold on any longer.

Outside the door, William was talking to his assistant, Frederic.

He searched in his pocket. He found that he had changed into a new set of clothes before going to the hospital and forgot to bring his cigarettes.

"Give me a cigarette."

As long as he was closer to that woman, he would feel irritable for no reason. This was a habit he had for many years.

In the kidnapping incident, he had spared no efforts to save her. So, it could be seen as the repayment of the kindness of Jane's parents in saving his grandfather back then. Now they were quits.

"Sir, smoking is forbidden here."

Frederic shook his head. Just now, he could tell that William was in a bad mood. He had been working for him for six years, so he had known the domestic trivia of the Duncans.

This woman was indeed not worthy of William in the slightest, but for some reason, they hadn't been divorced.

"Tell the lawyer to prepare the divorce paper and deliver it to me within three days."

William narrowed his eyes and leaned against the door with one hand in his pocket. Now, since they were quits, he just wanted this absurd marriage to end sooner.

It had been six years. Although he didn't care about marriage, he didn't want Jane to remain as his wife. Moreover, this woman always cheat on him. In the past, he just ignored it, but that didn't mean that he was willing to accept it.

"But Master Duncan...."

Frederic was in a dilemma. He was in favor of William escaping from this marriage, but Colin was a big problem. He was old and had high blood pressure. If he was sick from anger, William would also feel sad.

In his opinion, the best way was to tell Colin what Jane had done, so that William wouldn't be blamed.

"There's no need. If he knows that the person he liked so much for years was duplicitous, he would feel even more distressed."

William shook his head and rejected Frederic's suggestion. If he could end the marriage, he was even willing to bear the blame.

And Jane loved money and status. If she could keep everything unchanged, he believed that she would happily agree to a divorce. Moreover, this was also good for her and her adulterer.

As for her son, Dayton, he had been like a motherless child since childhood, so the divorce would not do harm to him.

William thought as he walked to the door. Then he was stunned. His son, Dayton, was hugging Jane, not letting go.

The woman closed her eyes and didn't move.

"Dayton, come down."

William's face was cold, and his tone was very serious.

In the future, he didn't want Jane to see his son again after they separated, so he had to eliminate those needless emotions.

"Daddy, I...."

Dayton was very reluctant. Mommy was so fragrant and soft. The kindergarten friends said that it felt so good to be hugged by and sleep with Mommy.

Dayton lowered his head, and his eyes were full of tears. He bit his lips. He also wanted to sleep with Mommy.

“Mommy is sick. Daddy, I want to stay with Mommy.”

After a long silence, Dayton mustered up the courage to defy Daddy. Perhaps, if he accompanied Mommy at this point, she would like him.
