A Cue for Love Chapter 837

Chapter 837 I Could Not Care Less

Samuel fed the second wedge to Natalie.

"It's just a betrothal," Samuel repeated firmly. "Plus, Luna and I hardly spent time with each other. It's impossible for her to have strong feelings for me." Samuel continued, "Even if she does, you've won me over first. That would not change. Whether or not she's upset, I couldn't care less. I only care about your happiness."

His final statement sounded extremely merciless.

However, Natalie had to admit that he was not in the wrong.

There wasn't so much right or wrong when it came to relationships, but rather the presence or absence of feelings.

Swallowing the piece of orange, Natalie flashed Samuel a smile. "Even if Ms. Garcia is betrothed to you, I have no intentions of letting you go. You're mine. I'm not letting someone else have you!"

"Good." Samuel's eyes were filled with overflowing adoration. "In that case, you should declare me as yours more often."

Meanwhile, as Luna exited the room, she noticed Steven following behind her.

"Mr. Steven, you don't have to send me off. I remember the direction I came from." Luna's tone was polite but distant.

"You're leaving in a few days?" Unable to help himself, Steven asked, "Can't you stay in Dellmoor for two extra days and return to Greenview slightly later?"

Luna tossed a quizzical look at Steven's request.

"Mr. Steven, what..."

"What I mean is, even though the poison has left Sam's body, it's still best to observe for a few more days. Your grandfather asked you to take care of Sam, right? So I think it's best if you stay and observe for a little longer." Unwilling to admit the truth, Steven came up with an excuse to ask Luna to stay.

The true reason behind Steven's request went undetected by Luna.

After she heard Steven's reasoning, she nodded seriously. "You're right, Mr. Steven. I'll stay back and observe Mr. Samuel's condition for a few more days. Only when I'm certain that Mr. Samuel is fine will I leave Dellmoor."

Steven was speechless, not knowing what to do with Luna.

She was not stupid, but the lack of experience made her naive. Because of that, she was unable to read between the lines.

Steven had originally made up his mind. Yet, for some strange reason, the words he wanted to say remained in his throat. Whenever he tried to speak, he would be at a loss for words.

Luna eyed Steven with her clear eyes. Seeing the hesitation on his face, she asked, "Are you okay, Mr. Steven? Is there something you want to tell me?"

Unable to say what he truly wanted to tell her, Steven sighed inwardly and gave up. Instead, he asked, "You've come to Dellmoor to treat Sam. I assume that you haven't gone anywhere fun? Let me take you to some of the places you can't find in Greenview, such as the aquarium."

At the mention of the aquarium, Luna's bright eyes lit up even more.

"Shall we?"

Since she was raised by her grandfather, Luna had matured at a young age. Even so, the child inside of her leaped for joy when Steven brought up the aquarium.

"Let's."

With that, Steven drove Luna to the aquarium.

Greenview was just a small town, so there was no aquarium there, unlike Dellmoor.

From the outside, the aquarium was already an impressive sight. However, when Luna followed Steven into the shark tunnel, she was so surprised that her jaw dropped.

Various fish of different shapes, sizes, and colors swam freely in the blue waters, passing from her left and right and even from above her head.

It was a peculiar yet amazing feeling for her.

Conversely, Steven had visited the aquarium way too many times when he was younger. Truth be told, he had gotten bored of the place. Nonetheless, when he saw the woman dressed in a white dress beside him staring at the fish in awe, he could not help but appreciate the wonders of the aquarium as well.

Suddenly, a simple-minded-looking plump child appeared out of the blue.

The child was so focused on running around that he was not looking in front of him as he charged toward Luna.

Out of reflex, Steven reached out subconsciously and grabbed Luna by her hand, pulling her closer to him.

“Careful.”

Just as Luna snapped out of her daze, she found herself in Steven’s arms.

Steven’s broad shoulders and warm arms were like a mighty fortress, shielding her from harm.

A Cue for Love Chapter 838

Chapter 838 No Need For Words

"I'm so sorry that he nearly hit you! My son deserves a beating!" the boy's mother began to apologize profusely.

Luna turned around and said with a smile, "It's fine. Just be more careful next time."

"Yes, of course."

After talking to the boy's mother, Luna looked at Steven and realized that he had been staring at her, and his strong arms were still around her.

She bit her lip and looked elsewhere before saying, "Mr. Steven, I'm fine now. Aren't you..."

Steven finally regained his senses and reluctantly released her.

"Okay."

"Thanks for your help just now." Luna moved a little away from Steven and continued, "If you didn't grab me in time just now, I think that child might have hit me."

"You're welcome. I'm glad to be of help."

After their bodies came into contact earlier on, both Steven and Luna suddenly went quiet.

Luna pursed her lips and focused on the colorful fish.

On the other hand, Steven was concentrating on her with a smile on his face.

There were many times Steven wanted to hold her hand.

Unfortunately, he had yet to succeed.

When Steven was younger, he had dated quite a number of women.

However, after several failed relationships, Steven started to ridicule himself.

What's the point of having so much experience with women?

With Luna, he felt like a fool who was in love for the first time. The thought of holding her hand made him so nervous.

The two of them spent the entire afternoon in the aquarium.

Seeing the selfie booth right at the exit of the aquarium, Steven suggested, "I guess you have never taken a selfie before?"

"No," answered Luna honestly as she shook her head.

"Then, let us take one together." Steven smiled gently and continued, "I think they will use the ocean theme for the background. We can take a photo as our souvenir."

"I... I don't really..."

Most of the time, Luna would be diagnosing patients with her grandpa in town and seldom took photos. That was why she felt awkward about it.

However, under the insistence of Steven, she still followed him into the photo booth.

Both their faces appeared on the computer screen immediately.

Luna was not sure how to pose, so she only stared into the camera and tried her hardest to smile.

When Steven saw that, he could not help but say, "To be honest, you look a little silly."

"Silly?"

"Yes, you must do something like this!" Steven immediately made a face at the camera.

Luna had always had preconceptions about the Bowers family. When she saw Steven making the funny face, she could not help but burst out laughing.

She had never expected Steven to be so hilarious.

When Steven saw Luna laughing so happily, he started laughing too.

The two of them took a total of eight selfies and made two sets so that they could have one set each.

When Luna saw the photos and glanced at Steven, who was standing next to her, her grin widened. She only suppressed her smile when she realized she was getting carried away.

Later on, both of them went to watch the sea animals' performance.

At the end of the trip, Steven placed an adorable baby otter plush into Luna's hands.

"What—" Luna was taken aback as she looked at the tiny and cute baby otter.

"It's for you." Steven smiled. "When you were watching the performance earlier on, I saw you staring at the otters for a very long time. Since we can't have a real otter, we'll just get this toy. But if you don't like it, I can—"

"I like it." Luna hugged the baby otter plush in her arms with a smile. "Thank you, Steven."

At that moment, their gazes met.

There seemed to be a subtle change in the looks in their eyes, yet there was no need for words to be said.
