

Lucille sighed. "Mr. Lewis, it's not that I don't want to discipline him but I am in no place to do so."

"How can the high and mighty Williams family not have the ability to discipline a child of theirs? That's ridiculous," Conrad mocked.

"Mr. Lewis, please hear me out," Lucille requested. "You are aware of the fact that the only reason my Williams family hasn't been able to develop as far as we'd like is our lack of privilege, yes? As a general, Zeke Williams is way out of our league. We simply have no way of containing him."

"How did you know he became a general?" Conrad asked.

"The last time Zeke went to Oakheart City, it was the colonel who greeted him at the airport personally. Who else apart from a general would get that kind of treatment?"

Conrad chuckled. "So, the Williams family has fallen victim to his tricks as well. I asked my son, who's actually a general, to search him up in their archives. There has never been a general in Eurasia with the last name of Williams. Furthermore, at his young age, how could he possibly be a general? He's just a lowly soldier. Asking the colonel to greet his arrival was probably just a front he put on to rub in your family's faces."

What?

Lucille was taken aback. "So that bastard has only ever been a soldier? How dare he mock us that way? He truly deserves to die. I even reached out to him and invited him back into our family, but he turned me down! He's getting in over his head."

Conrad continued, "So, what about what he has done to our family..."

Lucille replied, "Mr. Lewis, don't worry. I will force him to apologize to you personally."

Conrad shook his head, "No. I want his life. At the very least, I want to break both his legs."

Lucille gritted her teeth before answering, "Of course. However, if he involves the military power in this matter, I hope your son could help to back up the Williams family."

Conrad replied, "That wouldn't be a problem. By the way, I have also heard that Zach has proposed to my daughter? After this, I'll let my daughter marry into the Williams family. By then, my son will be your grandson-in-law. Whatever privilege he has belongs to your family as well."

Lucille was overjoyed. "Thank you, Mr. Lewis."

Lucille would never have thought that Conrad was doing all of this to gobble up her family's legacy.

After hanging up, Lucille hurried off to find her most beloved grandson, Zach Williams.

Zach and Zeke Williams looked mostly similar and even had similar figures to boot.

However, there was a sinister shadow between Zach's brows that differed him from Zeke.

Lucille told Zach everything that had happened to Zeke Williams.

After listening to everything, Zach's eyes widened in twisted joy. "I knew it! I knew that bastard could never have become a general. He deserves to die for mocking our family like this."

Lucille replied, "Zach, the Lewis family wants to kill Zeke this time. At the very least, they want to break both his legs. Conrad Lewis even promised me that after that was done, he would agree to your marriage with Robin Lewis. What do you think our next step should be?"

Zach thought about it for a while before he said, "Grandma, here's what I have in mind. The blood running in Zeke's veins still belongs to that of the Williams family. If we allow him to be killed by the Lewis family, we'll get talked down upon for betraying our own family member. How about we break both his legs instead? That way, it's entirely up to him if he lives or dies after that."

Lucille nodded. "That's a good idea. Zach, you've really grown a lot from before. Your plans are becoming more and more detailed. In a few more years, you can take over my place and become head of the household."

Zach was more than happy to hear that. "Thank you, Grandma. Oh, I heard that Zeke and his wife, Lacey Hinton, are truly in love. If we start our revenge on him through Lacey, I'm sure it'll be much more efficient."

Lucille nodded. “Okay, I’ll take your suggestion then.”

Zach and Lucille continued discussing in low voices for a while longer before heading out.

Soon, they arrived at a production company named Eurasia Pictures.

They had heard from outside sources that Lacey Hinton had come here to discuss a possible collaboration with this company.

Coincidentally, this production company was one of the many corporations under the Williams family.

The two of them hadn’t even stepped in when Lacey walked out.

She looked downcast and walked with her head lowered. By the looks of it, the discussion hadn’t gone very well.

Zach merely glanced at Lacey before his breath was taken away.

Lacey Hinton was far more gorgeous than any female celebrity he’d ever seen.

She had a certain almost fairy-like aura on her that no other woman could compete with.

Zach suddenly came up with a sick plan.

He called out, "Lacey, come over here for a second."

When Lacey saw Zach Williams, she automatically assumed that he was Zeke and walked over.

She looked at the two of them curiously and asked, "Zeke, what are you doing here?"

"I wanted you to meet Grandma," Zach lied. "This lady here is my grandmother."

Lacey took a quick look at the refined old woman before greeting her respectfully, "Hello, Grandma. I'm Lacey Hinton, Zeke's fiancée."

Lucille nodded coldly as a way of greeting her.

That made Lacey feel a little uncomfortable.

Does Grandma not like me?

Zach said, "Let's go, Lacey. I'll take you to see my old home."

"Okay."

With that, the three of them got into the car.

When Lacey entered the car, she looked around in suspicion. "Zeke, when did you change car? I didn't even know about this."

Zach came up with an excuse very quickly. “Ah, this is just one of the family cars. I’m borrowing it for a couple of days.”

Lacey nodded and did not push the subject further.

The three of them arrived at the Williams family’s mansion in Atheville soon enough.

Zach and Lucille left Lacey in the living room before hurrying off and preparing to put their plan into action.

Lacey remained in the living room as she slowly started to grow suspicious.

Didn’t he say he wanted to take me around? He just left me here. That doesn’t seem like what Zeke would usually do.

She had also started to feel that something was off about “Zeke”. The way he walked, talked and even the way he breathed was different.

Could this person be someone else?

But that wasn’t possible. How could there be two people who looked so much alike?

I’m probably overthinking.

She got up and started to roam around the living room.

As she explored the room, her gaze fell on a picture framed on the coffee table.

She picked it up and took a closer look. Instantly, her pupils contracted as her tears started to fall.

In the picture, Zeke was smiling brighter than she had ever seen and he had his arms around a girl.

That girl was Zeke Williams' antenatal betrothals, Robin Lewis.

Zeke, you have lied to me!

He told her he had never met Robin.

Then how could he explain the picture in which he was holding her so intimately, and even smiling so brightly?

Lacey felt as if her whole world had crumbled around her.

They were all lies. Everything she knew was a lie.

Zeke has only taken me as a rebound. I've never meant as much to him as Robin Lewis!

Lacey was in so much pain, she felt as though her heart could burst. She didn't want to stay in this place any longer so she turned to leave.

Zach was still waiting outside to make a phone call to Zeke and warn him that if he didn't break his own legs and apologize to the Lewis family, they would harm Lacey.

However, before he could dial his number, Lacey came walking out.

Zach ran up to her. "Lacey, what are you doing out here?"

Lacey looked at Zach angrily. "Why did you lie to me?"

Zach frowned and looked nervous. “What did I do?”

He was under the impression that Lacey had found out that he wasn't actually Zeke.

Lacey continued, “I can't believe you're still trying to hide everything from me even now. If you don't tell me the truth, I'll never forgive you.”

After that, she walked out.

Zach was about to stop her when he caught sight of the photograph in her hand.

Instantly, he realized what was going on.

Lacey must have assumed that Zeke was the one in the picture with Robin Lewis.

She probably thought Zeke was dating Robin behind her back.

Zach rolled his eyes and started to change his plan.

He gestured to the guards to let Lacey Hinton go.

After a minute or two, Lucille caught wind of what had happened and hurried over.

She reprimanded, “Zach, why did you let Lacey Hinton go? What are you trying to do?”

Zach said, “Grandma, I don’t think the Lewis family will actually be happy with simply breaking Zeke’s legs. I want to make life miserable for him.”

Lucille asked curiously, “What do you mean by that?”

Zach laughed. “I heard that Zeke takes Lacey more seriously than he does with his own life. If Lacey leaves him, won’t he be better off dead?”

Zach then told Lucille everything about the picture.

After Lucille heard that, she finally smiled.

“Zach, that’s a pretty interesting plan you have. If the Lewis family heard about it, I’m sure they’d be more than happy to let you marry Robin. Let’s do it according to your plan.”

Lacey returned to Trust Media.

By then, Zeke had already returned and was smoking in the hall.

When he saw Lacey, he put out his cigarette hurriedly and smiled awkwardly at her. “Lacey, what have you been up to? You’re back late.”

Lacey felt terrible and she said in a small, choked-up voice, “Smoke all you want. I’m not going to care about you anymore.”

Zeke frowned. “Lacey, are you okay? Did someone hurt you?”

Lacey shook her head with reddened eyes. “It’s none of your business.”

After that, she went into her office and slammed the door shut.

Zeke had no idea what was going on.

What’s up with her?

Why’s she ignoring me like that?

Maybe she’s in a bad mood. She should be fine by tomorrow.

Zeke didn’t worry too much about it.

The next day, Lacey received a call from the CEO of Eurasia Pictures.

They said that after some consideration, they felt that it would be a smart choice to work with Trust Media. They asked if she would be available to discuss the details over a meeting.

If she had heard this good news earlier, Lacey would have been overjoyed.

However, she couldn’t muster up any joy at all.

She felt as if she had been betrayed by Zeke

Williams.

After calming herself down, Lacey finally walked out of the office and headed toward Eurasia Pictures.

She bumped into Zeke Williams the moment she walked out.

Zeke passed her a bag of freshly prepared food. "Lacey, I bought breakfast for you. You should eat it while it's hot."

Lacey hesitated for a second before brushing past Zeke and leaving without another word.

There was nothing sadder than a withered heart.

Zeke wasn't even trying to explain anything to her. At this point, she had given up on him.

No matter how oblivious Zeke Williams was, even he had finally begun to notice that something was seriously wrong with Lacey.

There had to be some sort of misunderstanding.

He remained in deep thought as he walked into Lacey's room.

He had just stepped in when he caught sight of a photograph on her nightstand.

In the picture, Zach Williams had an arm around Robin with a bright smile on his face.

Lacey had definitely mistaken Zach for himself.

The only problem was how Lacey had gotten her hands on a picture of Zach.

That could only mean that Zach had met Lacey.

The Williams family had actually dared to anger him once again, and they even dared to toe the line.

And his line was Lacey Hinton.

For that, he would not let the Williams family off easy this time.

However, he'd better explain everything to Lacey now.

He hopped into his car and sped toward Eurasia Pictures.

At the entrance of Eurasia Pictures, Zach was acting all lovey-dovey with Robin.

Zach was the one who had come up with the idea to invite Lacey to Eurasia Pictures.

He wanted Lacey to see "Zeke" and Robin with her own eyes.

Apart from that, he was planning on impersonating Zeke to say something hurtful that would get to her.

He knew for sure that she would leave Zeke Williams after that.

Robin asked carefully, "Zach, are you sure this will work? Won't she suspect anything?"

Zach replied, "Don't worry. I look exactly like Zeke and we sound the same too. She definitely won't notice a thing."

Robin nodded. "Okay. You have to put on a good show later. I'll marry you once she leaves Zeke Williams."

As she spoke, Lacey's car was approaching them.

Zach immediately pulled Robin along with him. "Let's go. It's showtime."

Lacey hadn't even parked her car yet when she accidentally saw "Zeke" and Robin walking in her direction all wrapped up around each other.

Lacey felt as if her heart had just been ripped out of her chest.

So the two of them had no qualms about being seen together anymore?

The pain in her heart nearly drowned her.

Zach pretended to finally notice Lacey and said in false surprise, "Lacey, what are you doing here?"

Lacey took a deep breath and calmed herself down, trying hard not to cry out loud.

"I want you to tell me what this is all about."

Zach sighed. "What's there to tell? It's exactly what you have seen."

Lacey could no longer hold back her tears and finally started crying.

He didn't even bother with any explanation or even try to console her.

How cruel could he be?

"Asole!" Lacey screamed. "You have betrayed me! You- you're heartless."

Zach was annoyed by that. "Betrayed? Heartless? I just needed something to play with. By the way, weren't you pretty happy when we were together? It's not like you have anything to lose, right? How have I betrayed you then?"

Robin added salt to her injury. "How can an ugly duckling like you ever wish to marry into the Williams family? Just keep dreaming. Only I can live up to Zeke's reputation. Isn't that right, Zeke?"

Zach replied, "Robin, don't worry. You're the only one I'll ever love for the rest of my life. No other woman can even hold a candle to you."

Zach's words were like thousands of small knives cutting into Lacey's heart.

That's right. I can't live up to Zeke, nor can I match up to his true love.

I'm nothing but a joke. A complete joke.

She turned around. She was devastated and she just wanted to leave this place.

She would never come back to Atheville again.

However, she had just opened her car door when a car stopped next to her abruptly.

A familiar figure walked down from the car.

It was Zeke Williams!

Lacey looked at Zeke before turning to Zach. Her mind was in overdrive.

How could there be two Zekes?
