

Robin's father and the head of the clan, Conrad, became furious. "Sit down and eat your food. A fly like him isn't worthy of disrupting our meal."

The rest of the family laughed.

He's right. That guy is nothing but an unwanted son without the protection of the Williams family.

A fly like him shouldn't affect our mood.

Robin could only sit down and continue eating in frustration.

"Robin, bring a few men with you and teach him a lesson," Conrad said after eating. "He's not calling off the marriage. We should be the ones doing it."

Robin nodded hurriedly. "Don't worry, Dad. Leave it to me. A dog like him doesn't get to decide on switching owners just like that. He can dream on."

"Yeah. Come back right after you're done dealing with him. We have more important things to do than this."

Meanwhile, at Trust Media.

"What's the meaning of this article, Zeke?" a jealous Lacey asked as she handed her phone over to Zeke.

What's wrong?

Zeke took the phone curiously and instantly felt overwhelmed upon glancing at the headlines.

It was the news about Zeke calling off his engagement with Robin Lewis.

Then, Zeke indistinctly recalled that he actually had a fiancée, but he had never met her.

He would have even forgotten about this matter had Lacey not reminded him.

"I would've completely forgotten about this if you hadn't brought it up, Lacey," Zeke hastily explained. "I've heard that I had been engaged with this woman since birth. But I've never met her, nor have I ever acknowledged her status as my fiancée."

"Then how did you suddenly think of calling off your engagement with her?"

"I didn't say any of this. I'm guessing someone is spreading rumors intentionally."

"Really?"

"Of course. When have I ever lied to you?"

Lacey began to feel better. "That's a wise choice."

Zeke smiled. "You're the most beautiful woman in the world to me, Lacey. No other girls matter to me."

Just then, the sounds of destruction and a woman's yelling came from outside the door.

What's going on?

Zeke walked outside hurriedly while holding onto Lacey's hand.

They arrived at the lobby to see a woman smashing up the office in fury.

All the employees avoided her in terror, no one dared to stop her.

The woman looked especially noble in all her jewelry, and her looks were comparable to those of Dawn Castaneda.

However, her violent behavior certainly didn't match her appearance.

"Stop it!" Zeke roared. "Who are you? Why are you causing a scene here?"

The woman responded, "I'm Robin Lewis of the Lewis family. Tell that mutt, Zeke Williams, to come out here."

So she's Robin Lewis, the woman Zeke had called off his engagement with.

Lacey sighed with relief upon seeing that the woman didn't recognize Zeke.

So Zeke was telling the truth.

"That would be me," said Zeke.

You?

Robin glanced at Zeke before sneering. "Huh, so this is what you look like? You probably can't even get yourself a wife, and yet, you have openly called off your engagement with me? Do you not know where you stand?"

"So are you here to ask me to change my mind? Sorry, but you're not good enough for me."

Sh*t!

Robin was beyond exasperated.

Not good enough for you? You're saying that I—the young lady of the Lewis family—am not good enough for a dog like you?

This was by far the biggest insult to Robin Lewis.

“Screw you! Who the hell gave you the courage to speak like that?” Robin screamed. “You’re the one who’s not good enough for me, you b*stard! I want you to publicly apologize to me and clarify that it’s the Lewis family who is calling off the engagement and not you.”

“First of all, I’ve never even acknowledged our engagement, let alone publicly renounced it,” Zeke replied. “Secondly, you’re the one who came over and began smashing up my place. You should be the one apologizing.”

Robin scoffed. “You should be honored that I’m wrecking your little company. I’m giving you one last chance. Make a public apology in three days and clarify that it’s the Lewis family who has dumped you, or I’ll shut your company down and kick you out of Atheville.”

Zeke began to grow impatient. “Are you insane? I told you I’ve never even acknowledged this engagement, so how could I have publicly renounced it? Get out of here now. You’re disrupting my business.”

“Hmph, don’t blame me for doing things the hard way then,” Robin remarked coldly. “Smash this place up until he agrees to apologize!”

The two bodyguards Robin had brought along proceeded to wreak havoc on the place.

Bastds!

In a fit of rage, Zeke kicked the two bodyguards out of the office. "I'm not going to forgive anyone who dares to lay a finger on this place."

"How dare you attack my men? Do you have a death wish? I shall keep to my words! I'm going to smash your company up," Robin yelled in anger.

Then, she began to wreck the place herself.

Slap!

Zeke slapped her across the face without any hesitation. "I keep to my words too. I won't forgive anyone who lays a finger on this place."

Everyone gasped in shock.

Zeke had actually slapped Robin in the face.

That's the princess of the aristocratic Lewis family!

He just put himself on death row with that slap.

They're so going to kill him.

Robin clutched her face in disbelief. "You... How dare you hit me? You son of a b*tch! You b*stard! Do you not know how wealthy and powerful my family is? My brother is a general too! I'm going to make sure you die for hitting a general's sister!"

“General? Hmph. Judging from how cocky his sister is, he’s probably trash too. He’ll be stripped of his rank sooner or later,” Zeke remarked.

“Okay, I’m going to tell my brother exactly what you’ve just said. That shameless b*tch over there who’s still into the trash I’ve gotten rid of will die too!”

Slap!

Zeke slapped Robin in the face again. “You can hurl insults at me, but I won’t forgive anyone who insults my wife.”

F*ck!

Robin was so furious that she could explode.

How could the Lewis family continue to stand tall after she had been slapped?

Their honor wasn’t going to be restored even if they killed Zeke.

She gritted her teeth and walked out of Trust Media, filled with intense rage.

Lacey got really worried. “That was reckless of you, Zeke. She’s from the Lewis family and they have a general in the family. We... We can’t afford to provoke them. What are we going to do now? We might even have to leave

Atheville.”

Zeke smiled and assured her, “Don’t worry, Lacey. It’s just the Lewis family. I don’t give a damn about them. They think they’re all that just because they have a general in the family? In that case, I’m going to turn him into a peasant.”

Lacey just shook her head and sighed.

There he is bluffing again.
