A Cue for Love chapter 1017

Chapter 1017 Kiss Lasted Too Short

Anna stared at Natalie, who was smiling mischievously and was impressed by her strategy.

"It's not hard at all." Anna smiled. "I'll wait for you to send me the information about Helma, then I can start focusing on the design."

"Okay." Natalie stretched her hand out. "I hope we'll have a great time working together!"

"Of course!" Anna tightly grabbed her friend's hand as lots of emotions were reflected in her eyes. "Also, thank you!"

"There's no need for us to be so courteous with each other from now on, okay?"

"Okay," Anna agreed. I swear, Natalie is my savior and the source of my good fortune! I feel like as long as I follow her, everything will go smoothly. My life and career are just getting better and better instead of returning to how it was in the past. There's no way I'll let Natalie get rid of me. I'm following her for the rest of my life!

After the discussion about the collaboration was over, Natalie spent the next few days at her company and at home. When she was at the company, she would work really hard. Once she returned home, she would research the books her granddad left for her to find any clues that might help remove Samuel's poison.

A couple more days passed, and it was time to head to the Leitz residence to measure Helma's sizes and discuss the preparation.

It was a stormy day when Natalie drove to the Leitz residence.

Just as she was about to approach her car with an umbrella, a big, black umbrella appeared above her.

"Hmm?" She raised her head and saw Samuel's dark eyes.

"The rain's getting too big. I'll drive you to your destination." His bony fingers held the umbrella as he whispered, "I'm worried about you going alone."

"I can handle it myself."

"Sure, but I can accompany you, too." He narrowed his eyes and pulled her into his embrace. "Don't push yourself too hard. You've been working tirelessly lately. You should at least take a nap on the ride."

She hugged his waist and buried her head in his chest, smiling. "Thank you, Hubby."

He lowered his head and smiled at her, too. "It's my pleasure."

Like a knight, he escorted her into the passenger's seat while holding the large umbrella.

After she went in, he walked over to the driver's seat. As he closed the umbrella, rainwater unavoidably splashed onto his body, but he didn't mind.

Natalie was indeed very tired, so she closed her eyes and rested on the passenger seat.

The edge of Samuel's lips curved upward as he adjusted the air conditioner to an appropriate temperature before driving her to the Leitz residence.

The sound of rain hitting the car window made for relaxing white noise.

The whole journey took around half an hour. Natalie woke up when the car stopped in front of the Leitz residence. She noticed the storm had gotten much smaller, and she felt a lot better after taking a nap.

"I'll wait here until you're done," Samuel informed in a deep voice.

"All right. I'll finish it up as soon as I can." She unbuckled her seatbelt and prepared to exit the vehicle when she remembered something.

Before getting off the car, she landed a quick kiss on his lips.

That little brat... Isn't the kiss a bit too brief?

With that thought in mind, Samuel touched his lips. There was nothing but affection and love in his narrow eyes.

When Natalie arrived at the entrance of the Leitz residence, a butler in a uniform greeted her, "Are you Ms. Nichols?"

"I am."

"Ms. Helma has been waiting for you in the living room. Please follow me." The butler led her into the luxurious residence of the Leitz family.

Natalie had seen plenty of mansions before, yet she was still blown away by how dazzling the interior of the Leitz residence was. The oil painting on the ceiling alone was enough to overwhelm her. The burgundy wool carpet on the floor gave her a sense of solemnity.

Upon arriving at the living room, the butler knocked on the door and informed, "Ms. Nichols has arrived, Ms. Helma."

"Let her in." A gentle, feminine voice was heard coming from inside the room.

The butler left as Natalie entered the living room.

The decoration in the room was as luxurious and elegant as what she had seen prior. Whether it was the decorative paintings on the walls or the crystal chandeliers, they highlighted the extraordinary identity and status of the house's owner.

A woman in a slim-fitting pink dress who was standing next to the window caught Natalie's eyes.

The woman's wavy hair was draped on her left shoulder. Even though she was at her own home, she still had delicate makeup applied to her face. While her facial features weren't that impressive, she was exuding an air of natural elegance, which added to her charm.

"Hello, Ms. Nichols." Helma turned around and stared at Natalie.

"Hello, Ms. Leitz," Natalie greeted back. There was neither humbleness nor arrogance in her eyes.

Helma studied Natalie from head to toe. As the former saw how composed the latter was, it endeared the latter to the former.

After all, she didn't believe someone who fawned over her could design jewelry worthy for her to wear at the banquet.

"Sit here." She pointed at a chair.

"Thank you." Natalie took her seat.

After Helma sat, she smiled with glimmering eyes. "I'm very impressed with the 'Rebirth' series launched by Dream Corporation. It's innovative, and the design is very striking."

She paused and continued, "It's why I've hired Yvette as the middleman to ask Dream Corporation and Muse to design me a special jewelry."

Helma was a relative of the royal family, so her regal upbringing prevented her from saying that she wanted to show off at the banquet.

Even though she didn't say it aloud, Natalie understood her intentions.

Natalie smiled. "No worries, Ms. Nichols. I ensure you that Muse's design will look as fabulous as you hope for."

"Really?" Joy flashed across Helma's eyes.

"Of course." Natalie nodded.

Helma's cheeks began flushing, and her smile turned brighter when she heard Natalie's reply. "I thought Dream is just a design company. I certainly didn't expect it to be more than meets the eye. Not only does the company have a talented designer like Muse, but it also has an excellent boss like you, Ms. Nichols."

She joyously held Natalie's hand as she spoke.

Natalie allowed Helma to do that, but she still maintained a reasonable distance away from her client. "You flatter me!"

Helma proceeded to ask a bunch of other things as she stared at Natalie.

Natalie answered all the questions appropriately, and they had a great time talking with each other. The conversation made Helma very satisfied with Natalie.

"I still need to measure your sizes, Ms. Leitz," Natalie reminded.

"Okay!" Helma cooperated with Natalie as the latter quickly measured all the former's sizes and recorded all the measurements.

Just as Natalie was about to leave, Helma cheerfully invited, "It's about time for dinner. How about you stay and enjoy a meal with me?"

Natalie shook her head. "I appreciate your hospitality, but I must leave and continue to discuss your design with Muse."

Helma complied with Natalie's request and nodded instead of insisting on her staying. "Then I'll find another opportunity to treat you to a meal."

"Sure!" Natalie smiled.

Helma asked her housekeepers to send Natalie to the exit.

When Samuel saw Natalie strolling out of the Leitz residence, he stepped out of the driver's seat. Then, he opened the umbrella and approached her.

Concurrently, Heidi had just returned in her car. She was in a bad mood because she was annoyed by the rain, but when she raised her head, she saw a charming man with an air of divinity around him.

He was nearly one meter and ninety centimeters tall. His white shirt was wet from the rain, which made it cling to his lean and sturdy body. He had broad shoulders and a narrow waist. His legs were so slender that they made him look like a perfect male model.

The most alluring part about him was his face.

His cold eyes, tall nose, and thin lips were irresistibly attractive to her.

Heidi had met plenty of handsome men before, but the man in front of her totally swept her off her feet.
