Life at the Top Chapter 1966 - 1970

Inside the headquarters of Quantum Fund in New York of the United States, Soros frowned as he looked at the busy team.

His good mood from before was gone. Even though he knew that the Somerland government's countermeasures would inevitably come, he did not expect the Somerland government to stab him in the heart from such a strange angle at this critical moment.

"This definitely looks like something Jasper would do. It was done beautifully while being impactful and straight to the point."

Rogers' voice from the side caused Soros to turn his head. Then, he said, "What do you think we should do now?"

"We can't stop the attack on the Haddock Chamber of Commerce, and we must instead intensify it."

Rogers contemplated for a while and said, "Actually, everyone including you and Jasper overlooked a very important issue.

"Yes, the listing of these state-owned enterprises will bring in a lot of private capital, some even foreign, into the Somerland A-share market to buy the stocks of these state-owned enterprises, but this will produce a siphonic effect.

"These state-owned enterprises are the core of absorbing capital. They absorb not only external funds but also funds in the stocks of other companies in the original A-share market. The other companies are worried that there is no place for them to hedge, but when these state-owned enterprises enter the market, they will inevitably sell their stocks and buy the stocks of state-owned enterprises. Such is the nature of the capitalists. Neither the Somerland government nor Jasper can change this.

“Under such circumstances, the A-share market seems to have stabilized, but in reality, most of the funds have been sucked away by state-owned enterprises while the remaining company stocks will be faced with difficulties.

“This is the chance for us to completely destroy the Haddock Chamber of Commerce,”

Soros frowned and said, “If that’s the case, we’ll have to burn the funds we used to short the market.”

Rogers patted Soros on the shoulder and said, “There are indeed winners in the capital market, but there can be no gods who will always win without losing money. At this point, me and you, as well as our investors, will agree with this.”

Soros nodded slowly and said, “Yes, what you said is right... Then we will increase our efforts to crush the Haddock Chamber of Commerce.”

At this moment, the press conference was closed in a flash while the call auction stage had also officially ended.

In the futures market, the tug of war over foodstuffs continued. While the two sides were still transacting at a rate of 100 million Somer Dollars per minute, the A share market had already set off a huge ripple.

Huge amounts of funds poured in from the outside, including domestic funds and foreign hot money. Meanwhile, hot money began pouring into the A-share market like sharks smelling blood.

Their goal was unified, and they were targeting this batch of state-owned enterprises that had just gone public,

Led by the two major oil companies and supplemented by the communications industry, the share prices of these state owned enterprises soared, leading an upward trend of their respective sectors and the overall market.

“After 10 minutes of opening, A-shares opened at 2434 points. It has opened higher and is moving gradually upward. Currently, it is at 2499 points and is hitting the 2500 key point. It should not be very difficult to break through this point. Among them, newly listed state owned enterprises have reached their daily limit as soon as trading commenced. At present, there is still a huge influx of funds, while it has risen to the limit, the quotations are still going up.

Baz suppressed his excitement and said, “ Judging from this situation, it is not a problem for these state-owned enterprises to create more than 15 daily limits for the market.

“Due to the good news gained from the listing of these state-owned enterprises, the share prices of the sub-sectors of the relevant upstream and downstream industry chains are also rising and the market is improving!”

The moment Baz finished saying that, the A-share market officially broke through the 2500-point mark and surpassed 10 points in one breath. The offensive began to slow down near 2510, but it was still rising.

“Very good.”

Jasper breathed a sigh of relief and said, “ We made the right choice by betting on this.”

The sentiment in the market was more enthusiastic than Jasper imagined. These state-owned enterprises closed their daily limit within a few minutes of listing, bringing nearly tens of billions of funds to the entire A-share market. Meanwhile, this inflow was still increasing.

This hot money had not only revived the A-share market but had also dissipated a lot of the pessimism in the market due to the recent attacks of Quantum Fund.

Over the next two hours, the market reached a few essential small points of 2550 and 2590 points from an initial 2510 points. However, when it was about to hit a high of 2600 points, an accident happened.

The three major sectors of tea, wood, and textiles suddenly encountered an unprecedented fierce attack. Almost all of the stock prices in the listed companies in this sector plummeted and began to plunge rapidly.

Even the textile industry that Jasper had been supporting before was beaten black and blue when faced with a large number of empty orders. The scene was extremely tragic.

The direct chain reaction was that the entire upstream and downstream industrial chain had been affected, and the clothing, cloth, furniture, and beverage markets were all in a state of emergency.

With that, a marvel appeared in the A share market.

On the one hand, there was a sharp rise in energy and communications sectors, while on the other, there was a sharp drop in the light industries like textile and wood

The sharp contrast brought about the exponential surge in trading volume and the violent fluctuation of the support points in the market.

At this time, Jasper also realized the key issue that Rogers had earlier spotted.

The siphon effect brought about by the listing of state-owned enterprises had begun to take effect.

Almost all of the hot money in the market had been absorbed by these state-owned enterprises, and the cost for the related sector's increase was the sharp drop in the light industries where the Haddock Chamber of Commerce was located.

Because the hot money was all sucked away, market capital began to pursue the sector where state-owned enterprises were located, such that it had become extremely difficult for Jasper to protect the market.

“Mr. Laine, do you want to step in?” Baz asked hurriedly.

Jasper pursed his lips and said nothing.

He was thinking.

At this time, Celine had gotten up to stand next to him unbeknownst to him.

Baz was extremely anxious, but he did not dare to interrupt.

It was Celine who gently put her hand on Jasper’s shoulder and said, “You are not a god and it is impossible for you to be perfect. The most sensible thing to do at this time is to give up.

“The A-share market has a limit for its fluctuations. At most, there will be a 10% drop in a trading day, so let’s bear it for now.”

Jasper frowned. He knew what Celine said was correct, but...

After letting out a sigh, Jasper said to Baz, “Let’s give up.”

Baz also let out a sigh. It was unknown whether he did so because he was glad or disappointed. Then, he turned around and went out.

Just as Baz was about to leave the room, someone came in from outside.

Life at the Top Chapter 1967

The person who had just arrived was Dean.

Right now, Dean's face looked anxious, and it was as if someone had a fire lit under his bottom.

It was obvious that he had something very urgent to tell Jasper, but after seeing that Baz was still in the room and there was also a strange but extremely beautiful woman he did not know standing there, he felt as if all the words he wanted to had been sealed by glue when they reached the tip of his tongue, such that he could not utter a single word.

"M-Mr. Laine, I have very important matter to discuss with you."

Dean stammered.

After reaching a private agreement with Jasper, Dean had subconsciously regarded himself as Jasper's subordinate. This was a completely different feeling from before.

Although he did not want to admit it, he also understood that he had to rely on Jasper if he wanted to take over the power of the Haddock Chamber of Commerce. He had no other way.

Should he depend on Gale?

He would need to do things according to Jasper's will before he could even talk to Gale.

Now that the Haddock Chamber of Commerce was under attack, Gale had no good solution, so he could only send Dean to find a way to get Jasper to take action. At the same time, he would also regard this as a test for Dean in order to become his successor.

By doing so, he would also be currying favours with Jasper. However, if he simply got close to Jasper, he could directly replace Gale and take charge of the Haddock Chamber of Commerce in one swift move. However, if he did what Gale wanted, he would only get the status of the successor. As long as Gale was still alive, he would not be able to even think about handling any real power.

Even if Gale died, the unruly guys of the Haddock Chamber of Commerce were extremely sneaky. Without Gale, Dean felt that he might not necessarily have the qualifications and experience to suppress those people.

Thus, when Jasper offered to privately cooperate, Dean agreed without hesitation.

The price of this agreement was that he would no longer be Jasper's equal...

However, Dean also comforted himself. Even if he did not agree, did his current self possess equal qualifications and the possibility to be on the same level as Jasper?

"There is no outsider here, just tell me,"

Jasper said.

Jasper would not say this if it was Anna or even Wendy in the room, but not Celine.

It was not that he was not close to those women, but their positions in JW were different.

Wendy was naturally closest to him and she was JW's boss, but the problem also laid here. Jasper could not let Wendy know about a lot of the things that were classified as secrets.

According to Jasper's plan, Wendy would b e in charge of JW's daily affairs, so the dirty affairs that he handled that would need him to get in contact with external forces would not involve Wendy.

She was like the empress in ancient times. The emperor's harem was under the jurisdiction of the empress and the emperor would not intervene, but at the same time, the empress would not intervene with the nation's affairs.

Jasper could bear everything himself.

As for Anna, it was even simpler.

Although Anna was not a member of JW, because her relationship with him was extremely ambiguous and amorous, it was all but certain that Anna could not join the JW system. Jasper would forbid this because the Laws were behind Anna.

No matter how good Jasper's relationship with the Laws was, he could not expose all the secrets of JW to the Laws, just as the Laws would not tell him about their secrets.

This was the most basic rule and form of respectful communication between the two parties. After all, they were independent of each other.

Anna's background determined that she could not be a part of the JW system.

Jasper would not let her participate in any official business surrounding JW.

Yet, when it came to Celine, regardless of her background, ability, or experience, she was a good helper for Jasper when it came to external work.

They could handle a lot of things together and there would be no worries.

She was not like Wendy who could not interfere with JW's external strategy and overall policy because she was in charge of daily affairs, nor did she have a close alliance with JW like the Laws and did not possess a natural advantage because of her identity.

Right now, the things Jasper needed to consider when it came to the women were not simple matters like jealousy or fights between them. To put it bluntly, those things were trivial at the core, but he had to control and manage the power between them well.

Otherwise, terrible things would happen if something went wrong.

The most important thing right now was that Jasper felt that he was more like Celine's collaborator, rather than simply someone who had amorous feelings toward her.

Jasper's words clearly satisfied Celine. She glanced at Jasper with a half-smile while her eyes were telling him that she was glad that he was being respectful.

Meanwhile, Baz was tactful. After he learned that Dean was going to talk Jasper and it would be inconvenient if he was still around, he exited the room.

Dean exhaled and said, "Because of the continuous limit down and what happened in the market just now, the people in the Haddock Chamber of Commerce, which are mainly engaged in tea, wood, and other industries, are starting to panic. My grandfather is also struggling to endure the pressure..."

"He made three consecutive calls to me this morning. I can hear that he is already a little dissatisfied and impatient with my inaction and he intends to get someone to replace me."

Speaking of this, Dean was afraid that Jasper would abandon him. So, he added, "If I am replaced, then it is unlikely that I will appear in front of you again. It is hard to say who will take my place."

The meaning of this sentence could not be clearer. The subtext was simple, 'I was sent by Gale to ask you to save the Haddock Chamber of Commerce, but now Haddock Chamber of Commerce has not been saved and is instead in even worse shape.

'If you don't take action now, I'm afraid I will be replaced before the official reserves enter the market. Then, your plan to replace Gale will be ruined and the person who will replace me might not be so obedient...'

Jasper wanted to raise his hand to rub his temples, but found that there was still an I Vattached to the back of his left hand, so h e had to give up on that idea.

Jasper said, “Right now, you can’t let others lead you by the nose. So what if you’re replaced? If he gets someone else t o come, this duty will still fall on you if the person can’t meet me.”

“But...”

Dean was eager to say something but was interrupted by Jasper with a wave of his hand.

“At the moment, Soros’ purpose is very clear. It is to fully target the Haddock Chamber of Commerce. The more he intends to do this, the more we must resist falling into the trap he has prepared, otherwise, we will fall into a financial tug of war. We’re not his opponent in the domestic A-share market.

“As for the pressure on the Haddock Chamber of Commerce, you can find a few people you think can be trusted and tell them about the social security fund. I will endorse you, so don’t worry if they don’t believe you. Tell them to stay put and wait. If they can’t even wait for a while, then they’ll only have themselves to blame.”

After speaking, Jasper saw that Dean was still conflicted. So, he said, “This is my decision, I’m not discussing it with you, okay?”

Dean was taken aback. Then, he nodded, turned around, and walked outside.

Celine glanced at Jasper. Although she had been listening to them this whole time, she did not know Dean's identity and what kind of agreement he had with Jasper, but out of professional sensitivity and a woman's intuition, Celine understood that this guy must be scheming against someone again.

"I have just roughly analyzed the market. Although it is now closed because it's noon, the situation at the opening in the afternoon may not be good. The decline of light industrial enterprises will affect many other enterprises and industries. With such a wide impact, the market will inevitably be affected. At that time, the advantages brought by the listing of state owned enterprises may be cut short.

"In reality, the listing of state-owned enterprises only brings hot money from the outside, but these hot money are all directed at state-owned enterprises. In my opinion, the points in the market are generally inflated.

"Because only a few sectors of state owned enterprises are rising, it does not mean that the current domestic financial situation in Somerland has been eased, and even the existence of the siphoning effect has exerted a negative effect on other sectors.

"Do you have any good advice?" Jasper asked.

Right now, he really needed someone professional enough to give him some advice.

Jasper was also aware of the limitations of his own mind. For example, although there was a positive effect for the listing of state-owned enterprises this time, he failed to consider the siphoning effect.

A wise man would inevitably make mistakes, and Jasper believed that he was neither a saint nor an immortal, so it was impossible for him to achieve perfection. However, since things had escalated to this stage, he could no longer make any mistakes.

"No."

Celine shook her head.

"Truth be told, from the perspective of modern history, we can see that the most recent event in which countries disintegrated each other's power through financial means was the Plaza Accord signed by the United States and Sunrise Land in 1985, which was 15 years ago.

"Many people say that after the signing of the Plaza Accord, the wealth accumulated by Sunrise Land in the decades after World War II was plundered. In reality, if we carefully observe the incident, we can find that the lower class and the middle class in Sunrise Land's society welcomed the agreement after it was signed.

"Because their income could be converted into US Dollars without limit and the premium was very high, an ordinary salesperson could go to shopping paradise such as New York and Bali every month and buy luxury goods wantonly, let alone the large companies that bought out Times Square.

"The saying 'the people of Sunrise Land can buy the whole world' came out at that time.

"However, at the time, everyone didn't realize that they were using Sunrise Land's foreign exchange reserves for the things they bought abroad, be it a watch or a real estate project.

"In the decades after the end of World War II, the rapid economic development of Sunrise Land, the accumulation of technology, and the development of commerce had made their economic growth in those decades reach a terrifying level. This was followed by a growing foreign exchange reserve.

"But when the people used up the entire country's foreign exchange reserves, they actively devalued the dollar, playing right into the United States' plan, which led to the exponential increase in the exchange rate of Sun Dollars to US Dollars, while the trade deficit multiplied several times overnight. The people of Sunrise Land have exchanged decades of accumulation for a bunch of luxury goods and assets abroad.

"Then they find that the Sun Dollars they have on hand are worthless and they can't exchange foreign currency anymore nor can they exchange it for US Dollars because their foreign exchange reserves have all been squandered.

“As a result, a nation’s decades-long accumulation was wiped out overnight as they all became the nutrients for the United States to fill its own fiscal deficit.

“This is the real financial war between countries. When it is deployed, it waters everything quietly, and when it is launched, it will come crashing like a thunderstorm.

“So, although the current situation is bad, it is the best out of all the other bad outcomes. At least the United States has not made up its mind to fight a full-scale financial war with Somerland. Otherwise, at that time, JW and you can just step aside. In a war of that level, any company, even a multinational group, can only be cannon fodder, as what really determines the outcome is political power.

When Celine said this, she paused for a while before continuing, “So if you ask me for advice, I can only give you one, and that is to use your good relationship with the higher-ups to tell them not to use foreign exchange reserves because it will cause the incident to directly escalate.”

Jasper waved his hand with a bitter smile and said, “Swallow Capital has probably considered this for a long time. They never planned to use foreign exchange reserves. It is a matter of national defense and security.”

“Alright, I’ll stop talking to you now. It’s after work hours and I’m going to take a beauty sleep. Do you want someone bring you lunch?” Celine asked.

“No need.”

Jasper raised his left hand and said helplessly, “This stuff is too nutritious. It makes me feel very full after it’s injected into my body, so I don’t need to eat anything.”

“Alright. I asked the doctor before this, and it can completely replace the nutrients that you usually consume in your diet.”

After Celine finished speaking, she turned around and walked away seductively and enchantingly, like a feline.

After Celine left, Jasper returned to the lounge with his IV drip in tow. He wanted to rest his eyes for a while and wait for the opening in the afternoon.

Maybe it was because he had not had a good rest for too long, or maybe it was because the IV drip was too powerful, but Jasper slept very soundly. When he opened his eyes again, it was already 2:25 p.m. and the market was about to open.

The opening in the afternoon was exactly as Celine expected.

A-shares were still in a state of extreme contrast, but in the afternoon, the major stocks on both sides had either hit the limit down or limit up, so these funds began to enter other listed companies in related sectors.

Jasper did nothing in the afternoon, as he just watched Soros's movements.

On the other hand, Soros seemed to be going crazy, he had only one goal in his mind and that was to destroy all the listed companies belonging to the Haddock Chamber of Commerce.

As all the stocks of listed companies in the main industries of the Haddock Chamber of Commerce hit their respective limit downs, the scope of this blow soon spread to encapsulate all industries and listed companies that they could find belonging to the Haddock Chamber of Commerce.

One really had to lament the power of capital.

These listed companies, which were almost always looked up to by countless people in their respective industries in Somerland, seemed incredibly vulnerable at this moment, as if they were made from paper when faced with the attack of the Quantum Fund.

At the closing time, the market closed at 2577 points.

Foreign capital enjoyed an overwhelming victory.

Life at the Top Chapter 1969

The victory of the foreign capital upset both Jasper and the government.

“Originally, I thought the listing of state owned enterprises would alleviate the current decline of the domestic A-share market on a broad scale, but at present, although this strategy has achieved certain effects and results, it was far less effective than we expected.”

After the break, Jasper immediately got in touch with Mr. McNeal.

After this, Jasper would propose a very difficult request. Mr. Mason and the others would not necessarily have the decision-making power, so Jasper could only contact the person with the highest position possible, namely Mr. McNeal.

Thanks to Adele’s kindness, Jasper and M r. McNeal were able to talk to each other directly, which was truly the best decision at that moment.

Mr. McNeal pondered for a while, then said, “We plan to let the social security fund enter the market ahead of schedule.”

Jasper took a deep breath and said, “I am also calling you because of this.

“At present, Soros is still buying foodstuffs in large sums in the futures market, and if we fail to defend ourselves on the financial level, there is likely to be a social and economic regression, but the price of foodstuffs will rise dramatically.

“Once such a situation occurs, it will become very difficult for us. When that happens, it will be difficult to continue to develop the economy in Somerland, let alone maintain the needs of people’s livelihood.

“So, I hope Swallow Capital will consider my suggestion and let the social security fund enter the market tomorrow!”

Jasper's words made Mr. McNeal go silent for a while.

Jasper could clearly hear Mr. McNeal's breathing on the other end of the phone getting heavier.

"Tomorrow? Isn't this too hasty?" Mr. McNeal asked after some consideration.

"It's not, and it's honestly still too conservative. If I learned of the current situation earlier, I would have asked them to enter the market today."

Jasper continued in a deep voice, "The United States market will open tonight, and I will launch a full-scale attack. I am going to force Soros to face extreme pressure in one breath. If we fight a protracted battle, we have no chance of winning, so we must finish this in the shortest possible time to wipe out the power in Soros' hand."

"If I crash the United States stock market tonight, the investors backing Soros will face enormous pressure, whereby all the pressure will be transferred onto Soros. By then, he will have to make a choice to either withdraw or fight a decisive battle with us."

As he said this, Jasper's voice softened, but his tone became increasingly serious, "Mr. McNeal, this battle has been fought for too long, and neither private capital nor government capital can withstand such a long conflict. After all, our country is still very weak right now, and we need to focus our energy on developing the nation. Everything else can be put aside for the time being, so this decisive battle should be done sooner rather than later."

Mr. McNeal responded quickly this time. He said, "Okay, I got it and I will give you an answer as soon as possible."

"Thank you, Mr. McNeal."

Swallow Capital.

After putting down the phone, Mr. McNeal looked up at everyone in the conference room, stood up, and said, "Everyone, I think you all have heard Jasper's suggestion clearly. I think we should really think about it now."

The old man sitting in front of the table said with a smile, "Well, this kid is getting better and better, and he can actually look at this issue from a comprehensive perspective."

As soon as these words were spoken, the other participants looked at each other. Then, they suppressed the emotions in their eyes and stayed quiet.

The old man wearing black-rimmed tortoiseshell glasses turned his head to look at a fierce-looking old man beside him with a serious expression and said with a smile, "Mr. Butler, what do you think?"

"I agree with Jasper's opinion." The dignified old man's answer was straightforward, he did not hesitate at all.

The old man laughed and said, "Well then, let's vote and get a result as soon as possible so that they can carry this out as soon as possible."

By night, Jasper received a reply from Mr. McNeal just as the United States stock market was about to open.

Tomorrow, the social security fund would enter the market fully.

This was the best news for Jasper.

However, at the same time, the pressure on Jasper became even greater.

This was because if he wanted to completely stabilize the domestic financial market, the entry of social security funds into the market was only one aspect. The other aspect was not any less important than the entry of social security funds, and that was the victory that Jasper needed to achieve in the United States stock market tonight.

The more successful Jasper was, the more anxious the backers behind Soros would be, and by virtue of this, greater the pressure on Soros' Quantum Fund.

By further expanding upon the victory in the United States stock market, the huge pressure would force Soros and his Quantum Fund to end the harvesting and crashing of the domestic market as soon as possible in exchange for a chance for a decisive battle between the two sides. This was what Jasper would do tonight.

Moreover, it could not be delayed, so it had to be fully implemented tonight.

After thinking about it, Jasper called Jake.

"Tonight, we will do whatever it takes to destroy the top listed companies on the Nasdaq and Dow Jones that we drafted before.

"Take this plan."

Jasper handed Jake a plan he had written himself. "I've written the target stock prices of these companies listed above. The first task tonight is to snipe the stock prices of these companies and force them to these prices and then immediately buy them. Remember, we must use the short positions that we have never used to buy them. Do it through small-scale acquisitions with high frequency, and try not to attract the attention of others."

Jake looked down at the plan which listed the names of more than 20 companies and the current stock price information in detail, as well as the target stock price and the description of the amount of stocks to be purchased.

With just a glance, Jake was sure that the companies on this plan included the Internet, technology, automobile, and other companies that were bound to have great prospects in the new century.

It was just that some of these companies were old-school big companies while there were even some that he had never even heard of before.

However, this was not the time to ask questions. After Jake took the plan, he said to Jasper, "Mr. Laine, don't worry. We will definitely carry out this task well."

"Tonight will be very stressful. Let's go out and watch the market performance together."

After patting Jake on the shoulder, Jasper got up and said.

"Okay." Jake nodded.

In the evening of Somerland time, the United States financial market opened. Tonight was destined to be a night of fireworks.

Jasper continued in a deep voice, "The United States market will open tonight, and I will launch a full-scale attack. I am going to force Soros to face extreme pressure in one breath. If we fight a protracted battle, we have no chance of winning, so we must finish this in the shortest possible time to wipe out the power in Soros' hand."

"If I crash the United States stock market tonight, the investors backing Soros will face enormous pressure, whereby all the pressure will be transferred onto Soros. By then, he will have to make a choice to either withdraw or fight a decisive battle with us."

As he said this, Jasper's voice softened, but his tone became increasingly serious, "Mr. McNeal, this battle has been fought for too long, and neither private capital nor government capital can withstand such a long conflict. After all, our country is still very weak right now, and we need to focus our energy on developing the nation. Everything else can be put aside for the time being, so this decisive battle should be done sooner rather than later."

Mr. McNeal responded quickly this time. He said, "Okay, I got it and I will give you an answer as soon as possible."

"Thank you, Mr. McNeal."

Swallow Capital.

After putting down the phone, Mr. McNeal looked up at everyone in the conference room, stood up, and said, "Everyone, I think you all have heard Jasper's suggestion clearly. I think we should really think about it now."

The old man sitting in front of the table said with a smile, "Well, this kid is getting better and better, and he can actually look at this issue from a comprehensive perspective."

As soon as these words were spoken, the other participants looked at each other. Then, they suppressed the emotions in their eyes and stayed quiet.

The old man wearing black-rimmed tortoiseshell glasses turned his head to look at a fierce-looking old man beside him with a serious expression and said with a smile, "Mr. Butler, what do you think?"

"I agree with Jasper's opinion." The dignified old man's answer was straightforward, he did not hesitate at all.

The old man laughed and said, "Well then, let's vote and get a result as soon as possible so that they can carry this out as soon as possible."

By night, Jasper received a reply from Mr. McNeal just as the United States stock market was about to open.

Tomorrow, the social security fund would enter the market fully.

This was the best news for Jasper.

However, at the same time, the pressure on Jasper became even greater.

This was because if he wanted to completely stabilize the domestic financial market, the entry of social security funds into the market was only one aspect. The other aspect was not any less important than the entry of social security funds, and that was the victory that Jasper needed to achieve in the United States stock market tonight.

The more successful Jasper was, the more anxious the backers behind Soros would be, and by virtue of this, greater the pressure on Soros' Quantum Fund.

By further expanding upon the victory in the United States stock market, the huge pressure would force Soros and his Quantum Fund to end the harvesting and crashing of the domestic market as soon as possible in exchange for a chance for a decisive battle between the two sides. This was what Jasper would do tonight.

Moreover, it could not be delayed, so it had to be fully implemented tonight.

After thinking about it, Jasper called Jake.

"Take this plan."

Jasper handed Jake a plan he had written himself. "I've written the target stock prices of these companies listed above. The first task tonight is to snipe the stock prices of these companies and force them to these prices and then immediately buy them. Remember, we must use the short positions that we have never used to buy them. Do it through small-scale acquisitions with high frequency, and try not to attract the attention of others."

Jake looked down at the plan which listed the names of more than 20 companies and the current stock price information in detail, as well as the target stock price and the description of the amount of stocks to be purchased.

With just a glance, Jake was sure that the companies on this plan included the Internet, technology, automobile, and other companies that were bound to have great prospects in the new century.

It was just that some of these companies were old-school big companies while there were even some that he had never even heard of before.

However, this was not the time to ask questions. After Jake took the plan, he said to Jasper, "Mr. Laine, don't worry. We will definitely carry out this task well."

"Tonight will be very stressful. Let's go out and watch the market performance together."

After patting Jake on the shoulder, Jasper got up and said.

"Okay." Jake nodded.

In the evening of Somerland time, the United States financial market opened. Tonight was destined to be a night of fireworks.
